Minimal formal requirements for BA theses in English linguistics

Unless these requirements are met, the thesis should not be recommended for submission and/or accepted for evaluation with respect to content:

1. The thesis is within the length limit (as specified in the guidelines for English Studies BA theses, downloadable from the institute website, and/or advised by the supervisor)
2. As certified by the signed originality statement attached to the thesis, it contains no lifting or plagiarism, and no part of its text has been produced by generative AI
3. The language (incl. punctuation) used meets the criteria of CEFR Level C1
4. The thesis contains every part required by the guidelines (a title page, a plagiarism/originality statement, a table of contents, the text divided into chapters, references at the end)
5. The body of the text is organised into consecutively numbered chapters (and subchapters), which are in turn organised into paragraphs
6. The thesis uses a consistent system of in-text referencing, and contains a references list at the end, in one of the established Author-Date formats (as advised in the guidelines for linguistics theses, downloadable from the institute website)
7. The references list provides proper bibliographic data, with (at least) the surnames of the sources' authors adequately given, and the items alphabetically organised according to those surnames
8. The majority of the sources used in the thesis (and thus listed in the references list) are academic ones (books, book chapters, journal articles)
