

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements . . . . .	i
Table of Contents . . . . .	ii
Figures . . . . .	vii
Two Views of Consciousness and the Underlying Problem . . . . .	I
o Preliminaries
1. Why Aren't We Mere Objects? . . . . .	2
2. The Revived Consciousness Debate: Why Again, Why Now? . . . . .	4
3. Principal Aims and Intentions of this Book . . . . .	6
4. Hypotheses and Methodology . . . . .	II
5. Content and Structure: A Roadmap . . . . .	22
I Towards the Problem of Consciousness
Chapter 1—Historical Setting: How the Subject Became an Object . . . . .	33
1.1. The Rediscovery of the Mind-Body Problem . . . . .	33
1.2. Until Descartes: A Thumbnail Sketch . . . . .	43
1.3. Descartes . . . . .	53
1.4. Influxionism and Beyond: The Rise of the Metaphysicians . . . . .	63
1.5. From Systems to Systematics: The End of Metaphysics . . . . .	75
1.6. The Last Cartesian and Kant . . . . .	79
1.7. The 19th Century I: Psychology without the Soul . . . . .	84
1.8. The 19th Century II: From Fechner's Parallelism to Mach . . . . .	90
1.9. The 19th Century III: 'So Human an Animal'—Darwinism . . . . .	99
1.10. Afterthought: 'Die Grenzen der Naturerkenntnis' Then and Now . . . . .	105
Chapter 2—Terms and Problems of Cartesian and Post-Cartesian Ontology . . . . .	119
2.1. Terms I: Substances and Properties . . . . .	119
2.2. Terms II: Kinds and Concepts . . . . .	121
2.3. Mental Events and Conscious Beings . . . . .	122
2.4. Problems I: The Scope and Limits of Substance Dualism . . . . .	126
2.5. Problems II: The Scope and Limits of Physicalism . . . . .	136
Chapter 3—Consciousness As Experience: A Phenomenological Map . . . . .	139
3.1. Epistemic Properties . . . . .	140
3.2. Phenomenal Properties . . . . .	151
3.3. Intentional Properties . . . . .	157

Chapter 4—Causal Closure vs. Causal Pluralism . . . . .	163
4.1. Active and Passive Mental Events . . . . .	163
4.2. Kinds of Actions and Active Events . . . . .	164
4.3. Mental and Physical Causation . . . . .	168
4.4. Causal Closure and the Conscious Will . . . . .	175
4.5. Two Views on Causal Closure: Classic and Quantum Mechanics . . . . .	180
4.6. Observer Theories: A Causal Role for Consciousness? . . . . .	188
4.7. Causal Closure: The Very Idea . . . . .	191
Summary—The Two Problems of Consciousness . . . . .	195

II Seeking a Place for Consciousness

Chapter 5—Models of Consciousness . . . . .	199
5.1. Consciousness Theories: A Systematic Approach . . . . .	199
5.2. Irreducibility Proposals . . . . .	202
5.3. Reducibility Proposals . . . . .	203
Chapter 6—Substance Dualism and Interactionism . . . . .	209
6.1. An Outline of Dualism and Interactionism . . . . .	209
6.2. Mental-Neuronal Interaction . . . . .	211
6.3. Eccles' and Beck's Quantum Trigger Model . . . . .	212
6.4. Dualism, Dependency and Autonomy . . . . .	216
6.5. The Double- and No-Explanation Problem . . . . .	219
6.6. Dualism without Interaction: Parallelism . . . . .	220
Chapter 7—Epiphenomenalism . . . . .	222
7.1. An Outline of Epiphenomenalism . . . . .	222
7.2. The Argument from Evolution . . . . .	225
7.3. Is Epiphenomenalism Tenable? . . . . .	226
7.4. Learning without Consciousness . . . . .	228
7.5. Supervenience . . . . .	230
Chapter 8—Emergentist Materialism . . . . .	231
8.1. An Outline of Emergence Theories . . . . .	231
8.2. Emergence: Predictability and Reducibility . . . . .	235
8.3. The Emergence of Consciousness and the Explanatory Gap . . . . .	236
Chapter 9—Identity Theories . . . . .	239
9.1. An Outline of Identity Theories . . . . .	239
9.2. Types of Identity and Identity Theories . . . . .	240
9.3. How to Establish Identity . . . . .	241
9.4. Identity and the 1 st Person . . . . .	244

9.5. Identity, Occurrence, and Correlation . . . . .	246
9.6. Identity Theory and the Explanatory Gap. Again . . . . .	249
 Chapter 10—Eliminative Materialism . . . . .	251
10.1. An Outline of Eliminative Materialism . . . . .	251
10.2. The Rationale and Methodology of Elimination . . . . .	253
10.3. Folk Psychology Revisited . . . . .	254
10.4. Eliminative Materialism and the Explanatory Gap. Yet Again . . . . .	259
 Chapter 11—Functionalism . . . . .	264
11.1. An Outline of Functionalism . . . . .	264
11.2. Functional Identity . . . . .	267
11.3. The Turing Test: Some Objections . . . . .	268
11.4. Functionalism and the Explanatory Gap. And Yet Again . . . . .	271
 Summary: Consciousness: Still Searching for a Place . . . . .	274
  III The Traces Consciousness Leaves in Time
 Chapter 12—The Sequence Problem: The Timing of Conscious Intentions . . . . .	281
12.1. Consciousness and Its Footprints . . . . .	282
12.2. Mental Causation Postulates: CAP and CPP . . . . .	286
12.3. A Question of Timing: Mental and Neuronal Causation . . . . .	288
12.4. The Timing of Conscious Intentions . . . . .	292
12.5. Scope and Limits of CAP and CPP . . . . .	294
12.6. The Readiness Potential: A Historical and Psychological Review . . . . .	297
12.7. The Timing of Mental and Neuronal Events . . . . .	306
12.8. Is Consciousness Too Late? . . . . .	310
 Chapter 13—The Readiness Potential in Mental Causation . . . . .	317
13.1. A CPP-View of Libet's Results . . . . .	317
13.2. Mental Causation and the Readiness Potential . . . . .	319
13.3. First and Second Order Volitions . . . . .	321
13.4. Libet's W Revisited: Desire or Will? . . . . .	323
13.5. Binary Choice and the Case for Mental Causation . . . . .	327
13.6. Binary Choice and Randomness: The Psychology of Choice . . . . .	329
13.7. 10 Seconds: Old Wine in New Bottles . . . . .	333
13.8. How Apparent is Apparent Conscious Causation? . . . . .	340
13.9. Conclusions on Readiness Potentials . . . . .	343
13.10 Adjunct Findings on Readiness Potentials . . . . .	344
 Chapter 14—Time and Mental Causation . . . . .	351
14.1. The Trouble with T: Conscious vs. Metric Time . . . . .	351

14.2. Time Dilation and the Role of Consciousness . . . . .	360
14.3. Is There Evidence Suggestive of Cognitive Time Dilation . . . . .	364
14.4. Psychological Markers of Retrocausal Effects . . . . .	367
14.5. Retrocausality and Its Implications . . . . .	371
Chapter 15—Causation without Correlates I: The Zombie Case . . . . .	377
15.1. The Experimentum Crucis : What Zombies Cannot Do . . . . .	377
15.2. The Bafflement Argument . . . . .	379
15.3. Objections to the Bafflement Argument . . . . .	385
15.4. Bafflement and the First Person a Zombie is not . . . . .	389
15.5. The Revised Bafflement Argument . . . . .	393
Chapter 16—Causation without Correlates II: The Observer Case . . . . .	395
16.1. Objective Evidence for Consciousness? . . . . .	395
16.2. From Photons to Marbles . . . . .	398
16.3. Observers and Zombies: The Case for Mental Causation . . . . .	401
Chapter 17—Being a First Person: The Self . . . . .	403
17.1. The Conscious Self . . . . .	403
17.2. What is a Self? . . . . .	404
17.3. The Self as Construction and Substance . . . . .	409
17.4. The Self as a Bundle . . . . .	411
17.5. Streams of Consciousness . . . . .	413
17.6. Longitudinal and Vertical Disunity and the Self . . . . .	416
17.7. Absence of Content and the Self . . . . .	422
17.8. I = Awareness: A Dualist Proposal . . . . .	426
17.9. The Self and Its World: Weighing the Evidence and the Options . . . . .	429
IV Conclusion: The Self and Its World—An Interactionist Proposal
1. Minimal Interactionism . . . . .	432
2. Explanatory Simplicity, Physicalism, and Minimal Interactionism . . . . .	436
3. Interactionism and Its Critics: A Dialogue at the End . . . . .	443
V Appendices
Appendix I—Consciousness and the Observational Theories . . . . .	450
I.1. Consciousness and the Wave Function: A Theory Primer . . . . .	450
I.2. Does Consciousness Cause the Wave Collapse? . . . . .	454
I.3. Quantum Processes in the Brain . . . . .	457
I.4. Mental Perturbation of Fragile Random System . . . . .	462
I.5. The Scope and Limits of Observational Theories . . . . .	465

Appendix II—Further Studies Suggestive of Backwards Causation . . . . .	468
II.1. Retroactive Habituation with Positive and Negative Stimuli . . . . .	468
II.2. Retroactive Habituation and Affective Influence . . . . .	471
II.3. The Retroactive Causal Priming Paradigm . . . . .	473
 Appendix III—Consciousness, the Self, and Moral Obligation . . . . .	 476
 References and Bibliography . . . . .	 479
 Curriculum Vitae . . . . .	 537